URGENT & IMPORTANT

April 28, 2021

VIA EMAIL to all TCM schools

Dear TCM Principals/Administrators

Re: Extension of Temporary Policy on Online Classroom Instruction

I am writing to follow up our communications with you on March 14, April 22, July 21 and October 1, 2020 regarding the temporary policy and guideline on classroom instruction in response to the COVID-19 outbreak and the directive from the Ministry of Health on “social distancing”.

The temporary policy and guideline, which will expire on June 30, 2021, allow a recognized TCM training program in Schedule H to include components of instruction offered through distance learning partially in a course or fully in a course, when the school can provide evidence that the distance learning components adhere to the same standard and assessment as for the same regular in-classroom course(s).

The Education and Examination Committee recently convened to assess the continuous impact of the global pandemic situation with reference to the PTIB policy and the administrative schedules of TCM schools in Schedule H and approved to update the following temporary policy and guideline with an expiry date of December 31, 2021.

Temporary Policy (Updated April 21, 2021)

TCM schools in Schedule H have discretion how to respond to the Coronavirus (COVID-19) outbreak as individual institutions. The College approves online classroom instruction during this extraordinary time so that schools can have one more option for their response to this health situation.

Current approved courses in a Schedule H TCM recognized program can include using online virtual classroom technology for course material delivery with the sole intention of avoiding crowd gathering purpose on a temporary basis. The guideline is effective immediately to December 31, 2021 (Updated 2021-04-21).

Policy Guideline

1. The TCM schools in Schedule H have discretion how to respond. It is their responsibility to decide how to meet the students' learning need for quality instruction during this extraordinary time.

2. The courses must follow all guidelines and policies from the Ministry of Advanced Education and the Private Training Institutions Branch (PTIB) for online course instruction to ensure the permitted change in delivery format does not affect instruction quality, course content, and learning outcomes. There might be requirements to log student's attendance and participation during the online instruction for school administration purpose.
3. The courses must be taught by the same instructors (or instructors with the same qualifications), using the same course reference materials, following the same course outlines with the same learning outcomes as in the approved curriculum previously reviewed and approved by the Education Program Review team. This change only involves using an online technology to substitute in-person classroom instruction to deliver the course materials. The scheduled time, course content and course duration should not be changed.
4. When the public health risk associated with the virus is lower such that no public health directive to close or to lockdown a particular, some or all schools / educational institutions, but there is health directive to continue practising physical distancing, the involved school(s) can still consider to offer courses by online delivery method for students who cannot attend classes in person due to self-isolation and/or when following public health safety guidelines and restrictions. When there is any school(s) closure by the Public Health authority, the school(s) can consider offering courses by online delivery method due to students not able to attend in person in the classrooms due to safety concerns. Offering online instruction is an option and each school will make its own decision for its arrangement for currently running classes, which might include postponement and/or cancellation of classes.
5. This guideline is only for didactic courses. When clinical portions of the programs will need to be re-scheduled or cancelled, schools should try to offer the clinical courses at a later appropriate time as soon as possible. Virtual delivery of clinical training is NOT permitted.

Sincerely,

The Education and Examination Committee
College of Traditional Chinese Medicine Practitioners & Acupuncturists of BC
